Fuller Throws Eggs at Mr. Jenkins' Car, Stomps on Abigail's Petunias

By: JC

December 5th, 2001

Vancouver, Canada -- Early yesterday morning Ryan Fuller, three time Grand Prix winner, former Canadian National Champion, and all around rascal, was seen throwing eggs, taken from his mother's refrigerator, at Mr. Jenkins' '88 Honda Prelude. "I knew right away who it was," said an upset Jenkins, "that boy's always causing trouble around here."

Fuller's mischief had only begun. Later in the day, eye-witnesses spotted him stomping on Abigail Murphy's award winning petunias, tearing pages out of library books, and creating a fire hazard in the form of a brown bag containing dog feces, and leaving it on the Morrison family's doorstep.

Fuller's mother expressed regret, "We tried to raise him right, but he just keeps going on with these shenanigans. I do my best to punish him, but nothing works."

Fuller, a regular at high level magic tournaments, prides himself on being quite the prankster. At Pro Tour New York, he body-checked John Shuler, at New Orleans he failed to show up for day 2, refusing to even feign an interest in non-Masters competition, and in Africa he invented a new phase, the "Fuller-Step."

Jeff Donais, Level 5 DCI Judge, gave a stern warning, "If Ryan Fuller stays on his current path, he is headed for a grounding with no TV privileges for two weeks, I mean it."

Fuller declined comment, but smirked impishly.
