

An Announcement Regarding Untold Legends Of The Million Dollar Magic: The Gathering Pro Tour

Haven't seen your favorite weekly series of reminisces lately? Master Cunningham explains why and when you can expect it to be back.

By Jeff Cunningham | October 21, 2005

Jeff Cunningham Untold Legends Of The Million Dollar Magic: The Gathering Pro Tour Announcement "Daze.' The word was firm and in control, like Cunningham... He flashed back the Analysis, trying to find something, then nodded with pursed lips; "Not bad."

But who was it not bad for? It was for him. He drew Wonder off the Analysis, then pitched it to Aquamoeba, inflated his Rootwalla, and ditched his hand to Mongrel to pull out the match by inches. Cunningham wiped sweat off his brow. It was close, and he knew it, but even this close match was still worth a big smile." -Grand Prix: New Orleans 03 ~ Dear Friends, You may have noticed my column, Untold Legends of the Million Dollar Magic: the Gathering Pro Tour, has recently been absent. I am regret to inform the StarCityGames audience that, due to overwhelming workload, the article series is on a temporary hiatus. This break is also necessary so that I may finish assembling writers crucial to this venture, while ensuring a high standard of quality is maintained from article to article. I am very excited about the writers already committed to this project, and want to make sure they're properly featured. The fruition of this column is important to me. It will return after Pro Tour LA, as my assignments clear up. From there, it will advance on its regular schedule. If you need me, look to the sky (Wonder in the 'yard). Jeff

